

Back

Forward

Stop

Refresh

Home

AutoFill

Print

Mail

Address: http://news.com.com/2100-1001-975833.html?tag=fd_nbs_entp

go

CNET tech sites: Price comparisons | Product reviews | Tech news | Downloads | Site mapNEWS.COM
TECH NEWS FIRST

Front Page

Enterprise

E-Business

Communications

Media

Personal Technology

Investor

Sun veteran to join Seagate board

By John G. Spooner

Staff Writer, CNET News.com

December 3, 2002, 6:18 AM PT

Former Sun Microsystems President Ed Zander will join the board of directors at disk-drive maker Seagate.

Seagate, which is planning a new initial public offering, announced on Tuesday that the 15-year Sun veteran will become a member of its board. But the company did not offer details on just how involved Zander will be in its day-to-day affairs.

The Scotts Valley, Calif., drive maker had been a public company, but went private as part of a complicated buyout deal in 2000. Its plans for a second initial public offering come at a very difficult time in the ultracompetitive PC and server market, where Seagate sells most of its hard drives.

But unlike before its buyout, Seagate has been making efforts to expand beyond the PC market. As previously reported, it enjoys a bigger piece of the growing storage systems market, in which numerous drives are bundled inside network-attached storage gear sold by a range of companies such as EMC. The company is also now profitable.

Zander, who retired from Sun on July 1, hasn't said much about his future plans. His successes at Sun have often put him on the shortlist of candidates for companies looking for new chief executives.

Search

News.com

Go!

Free weekly newsletter!

Each week Michael Kanellos will cover the most important developments in Enterprise Hardware, delivered right to your in-box.

Latest Headlines

display on desktopNokia offers less encouraging viewIBM touts voice, handheld toolsSun veteran to join Seagate boardAOL to undergo revampingPerspective: Waiting for the Greenspan effectAvenue A adds interactive agencyHP lands deal with IRSJava spat to percolate in courtFile traders, studios spar in courtTI: Revenue showing signs of healthBug alert firm moves to soothe criticsAOL to address tough questionsPeopleSoft readies new business appsExperiment points to new spin

Back

Forward

Stop

Refresh

Home

AutoFill

Print

Mail

Address: http://news.com.com/2100-1001-975833.html?tag=fd_nbs_entp

go

CNET tech sites: Price comparisons | Product reviews | Tech news | Downloads | Site mapNEWS.COM
TECH NEWS FIRST

Front Page

Enterprise

E-Business

Communications

Media

Personal Technology

Investor

Sun veteran to join Seagate board

By John G. Spooner

Staff Writer, CNET News.com

December 3, 2002, 6:18 AM PT

Former Sun Microsystems President Ed Zander will join the board of directors at disk-drive maker Seagate.

Seagate, which is planning a new initial public offering, announced on Tuesday that the 15-year Sun veteran will become a member of its board. But the company did not offer details on just how involved Zander will be in its day-to-day affairs.

The Scotts Valley, Calif., drive maker had been a public company, but went private as part of a complicated buyout deal in 2000. Its plans for a second initial public offering come at a very difficult time in the ultracompetitive PC and server market, where Seagate sells most of its hard drives.

But unlike before its buyout, Seagate has been making efforts to expand beyond the PC market. As previously reported, it enjoys a bigger piece of the growing storage systems market, in which numerous drives are bundled inside network-attached storage gear sold by a range of companies such as EMC. The company is also now profitable.

Zander, who retired from Sun on July 1, hasn't said much about his future plans. His successes at Sun have often put him on the shortlist of candidates for companies looking for new chief executives.

Search

News.com

Go!

Free weekly newsletter!

Each week Michael Kanellos will cover the most important developments in Enterprise Hardware, delivered right to your in-box.

Latest Headlines

display on desktopNokia offers less encouraging viewIBM touts voice, handheld toolsSun veteran to join Seagate boardAOL to undergo revampingPerspective: Waiting for the Greenspan effectAvenue A adds interactive agencyHP lands deal with IRSJava spat to percolate in courtFile traders, studios spar in courtTI: Revenue showing signs of healthBug alert firm moves to soothe criticsAOL to address tough questionsPeopleSoft readies new business appsExperiment points to new spin

Back

Forward

Stop

Refresh

Home

AutoFill

Print

Mail

Address: http://news.com.com/2100-1001-975833.html?tag=fd_nbs_entp

go

CNET tech sites: Price comparisons | Product reviews | Tech news | Downloads | Site mapNEWS.COM
TECH NEWS FIRST

Front Page

Enterprise

E-Business

Communications

Media

Personal Technology

Investor

Sun veteran to join Seagate board

By John G. Spooner

Staff Writer, CNET News.com

December 3, 2002, 6:18 AM PT

Former Sun Microsystems President Ed Zander will join the board of directors at disk-drive maker Seagate.

Seagate, which is planning a new initial public offering, announced on Tuesday that the 15-year Sun veteran will become a member of its board. But the company did not offer details on just how involved Zander will be in its day-to-day affairs.

The Scotts Valley, Calif., company has had a complicated buyout and a difficult time in the market for hard drives.

But unlike before, Seagate has been able to expand beyond its core hard drive business. As previously reported, the company has a bigger piece of the server storage systems market, with numerous drives and network-attached storage devices being sold by a range of companies, including EMC. The company is profitable.

Zander, who retired from Sun on July 1, hasn't said much about his future plans. His successes at Sun have often put him on the shortlist of candidates for companies looking for new chief executives.

MAXIMUM INFO.

Search

News.com

Go!

Free weekly newsletter!

Each week Michael Kanellos will cover the most important developments in Enterprise Hardware, delivered right to your in-box.

Your e-mail here

Sign me up!

ines

ouragingdheld toolseagatempingfor theactiveRSe in courtepar in courtsigns ofmediaBug alert firm moves to soothe criticsAOL to address tough questionsPeopleSoft readies new business appsExperiment points to new spin

MAXIMUM INFO.

Back

Forward

Stop

Refresh

Home

AutoFill

Print

Mail

Address: http://news.com.com/2100-1001-975833.html?tag=fd\_nbs\_entp

go

CNET tech sites: Price comparisons | Product reviews | Tech news | Downloads | Site mapNEWS.COM
TECH NEWS FIRST

Front Page

Enterprise

E-Business

Communications

Media

Personal Technology

Investor

Sun veteran to join Seagate board

By John G. Spooner

Staff Writer, CNET News.com

December 3, 2002, 6:18 AM PT

Former Sun Microsystems President Ed Zander will join the board of directors at disk-drive maker Seagate.

Seagate, which is planning a new initial public offering, announced on Tuesday that the 15-year Sun veteran will become a member of its board. But the company did not offer details on just how involved Zander will be in its day-to-day affairs.

The Scotts Valley, Calif., drive maker had been a public company, but went private as part of a complicated buyout deal in 2000. Its plans for a second initial public offering come at a very difficult time in the ultracompetitive PC and server market, where Seagate sells most of its hard drives.

But unlike before its buyout, Seagate has been making efforts to expand beyond the PC market. As previously reported, it enjoys a bigger piece of the growing storage systems market, in which numerous drives are bundled inside network-attached storage gear sold by a range of companies such as EMC. The company is also now profitable.

Zander, who retired from Sun on July 1, hasn't said much about his future plans. His successes at Sun have often put him on the shortlist of candidates for companies looking for new chief executives.

MINIMUM SIZE.

Search

News.com

Go!

Free weekly newsletter!

Each week Michael Kanellos will cover the most important developments in Enterprise Hardware, delivered right to your in-box.

Latest Headlines

display on desktopNokia offers less encouraging viewIBM touts voice, handheld toolsSun veteran to join Seagate boardAOL to undergo revampingPerspective: Waiting for the Greenspan effectAvenue A adds interactive agencyHP lands deal with IRSJava spat to percolate in courtFile traders, studios spar in courtTI: Revenue showing signs of healthBug alert firm moves to soothe criticsAOL to address tough questionsPeopleSoft readies new business appsExperiment points to new spin

Back

Forward

Stop

Refresh

Home

AutoFill

Print

Mail

Address: http://news.com.com/2100-1001-975833.html?tag=fd_nbs_entp

go

CNET tech sites: Price comparisons | Product reviews | Tech news | Downloads | Site mapNEWS.COM
TECH NEWS FIRST

Front Page

Enterprise

E-Business

Communications

Media

Personal Technology

Investor

Sun veteran to join Seagate board

By John G. Spooner

Staff Writer, CNET News.com

December 3, 2002, 6:18 AM PT

Former Sun Microsystems President Ed Zander will join the board of directors at disk-drive maker Seagate.

Seagate, which is planning a new initial public offering, announced on Tuesday that the 15-year Sun veteran will become a member of its board. But the company did not offer details on just how involved Zander will be in its day-to-day affairs.

The Scotts Valley, Calif., drive maker had been a public company, but went private as part of a complicated buyout deal in 2000. Its plans for a second initial public offering come at a very difficult time in the ultracompetitive PC and server market, where Seagate sells most of its hard drives.

But unlike before its buyout, Seagate has been making efforts to expand beyond the PC market. As previously reported, it enjoys a bigger piece of the growing storage systems market, in which numerous drives are bundled inside network-attached storage gear sold by a range of companies such as EMC. The company is also now profitable.

Zander, who retired from Sun on July 1, hasn't said much about his future plans. His successes at Sun have often put him on the shortlist of candidates for companies looking for new chief executives.

THE IBM TOTALSTORAGE DS6000
with proven POWER5 architecture technology

- Modular design fits a standard rack
- Costs about a penny a megabyte
- Scales to over 67 terabytes

Search

News.com

Go!

Free weekly newsletter!

Each week Michael Kanellos will cover the most important developments in Enterprise Hardware, delivered right to your in-box.

Latest Headlines

display on desktopNokia offers less encouraging viewIBM touts voice, handheld toolsSun veteran to join Seagate boardAOL to undergo revampingPerspective: Waiting for the Greenspan effectAvenue A adds interactive agencyHP lands deal with IRSJava spat to percolate in courtFile traders, studios spar in courtTI: Revenue showing signs of healthBug alert firm moves to soothe criticsAOL to address tough questionsPeopleSoft readies new business appsExperiment points to new spin

Back

Forward

Stop

Refresh

Home

AutoFill

Print

Mail

Address: http://news.com.com/2100-1001-975833.html?tag=fd_nbs_entp

go

CNET tech sites: Price comparisons | Product reviews | Tech news | Downloads | Site mapNEWS.COM
TECH NEWS FIRST

Front Page

Enterprise

E-Business

Communications

Media

Personal Technology

Investor

Sun veteran to join Seagate board

By John G. Spooner

Staff Writer, CNET News.com

December 3, 2002, 6:18 AM PT

Former Sun Microsystems President Ed Zander will join the board of directors at disk-drive maker Seagate.

Seagate, which is planning a new initial public offering, announced on Tuesday that the 15-year Sun veteran will become a member of its board. But the company did not offer details on just how involved Zander will be in its day-to-day affairs.

The Scotts Valley, Calif., drive maker had been a public company, but went private as part of a complicated buyout deal in 2000. Its plans for a second initial public offering come at a very difficult time in the ultracompetitive PC and server market, where Seagate sells most of its hard drives.

But unlike before its buyout, Seagate has been making efforts to expand beyond the PC market. As previously reported, it enjoys a bigger piece of the growing storage systems market, in which numerous drives are bundled inside network-attached storage gear sold by a range of companies such as EMC. The company is also now profitable.

Zander, who retired from Sun on July 1, hasn't said much about his future plans. His successes at Sun have often put him on the shortlist of candidates for companies looking for new chief executives.

www.ibm.com/TotalStorage/urlTotal storage. Total power. Totally you.

Find out how a space-saving, on demand IBM TotalStorage solution can fit all your data — and make it work for you.

IBM TotalStorage™

Search

News.com

Go!

Free weekly newsletter!

Each week Michael Kanellos will cover the most important developments in Enterprise Hardware, delivered right to your in-box.

Latest Headlines

display on desktopNokia offers less encouraging viewIBM touts voice, handheld toolsSun veteran to join Seagate boardAOL to undergo revampingPerspective: Waiting for the Greenspan effectAvenue A adds interactive agencyHP lands deal with IRSJava spat to percolate in courtFile traders, studios spar in courtTI: Revenue showing signs of healthBug alert firm moves to soothe criticsAOL to address tough questionsPeopleSoft readies new business appsExperiment points to new spin