From: Samantha Daryn To: Heather Reeds
Subject: Power Renovations cc: Amadou Alain,

Great suggestion, Mike. Samantha, I think you should add Dan Misawa to this team. He's new to Marketing, representing the ready-to-assemble line. Also, I want you to take a look at the chart below. These numbers are very interesting.

Hvad er så lige aktivitetsbaseret samarbejde ?

An activity is the collection of relationships that emerge between people, the materials they work on, their communications, and the processes they use to achieve a goal

Examples

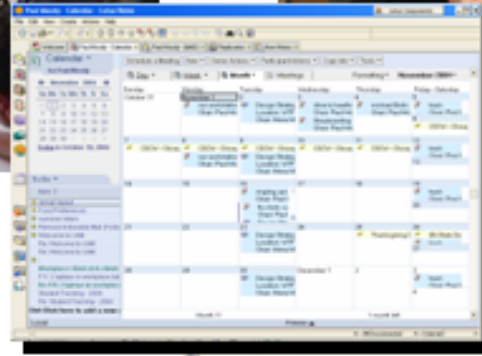

- Driving a sales process to close
- Preparing a response to a Request for Proposals (RFP)
- Resolving a trouble ticket

Goals for Activity centric computing

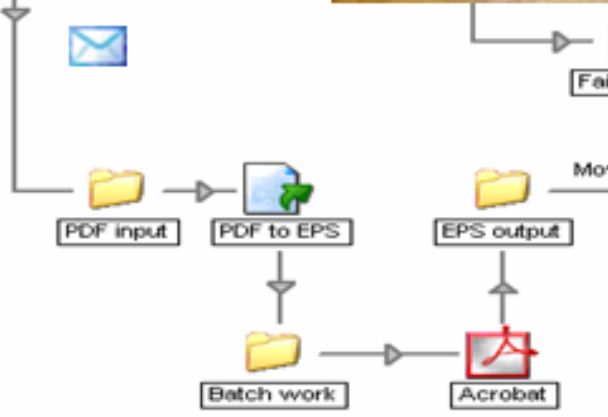

- ORGANIZE
work across tool boundaries
- SHARE
work and processes with people in an ad-hoc manner
- COLLABORATE
in the appropriate manner for the task at hand without worrying about what tool to use

By representing this collection explicitly, it becomes easier to work with – for instance: organize, share, delegate, take offline, analyze

Assembly of Components into a Composite Application

The screenshot displays a composite application with several overlapping windows:

- People Planner - All Employees - IBM Lotus Notes: A table listing employee details. A callout box labeled "Notes application" points to this window.
- Manager Workbench - IBM Lotus Notes: A central window containing a smaller "People Planner" table and a "Management Solution" section. A callout box labeled "3rd Party application" points to this window.
- Contact Record: A window showing details for Mali Vo, including contact information and a "Report-to Chain". A callout box labeled "Contact component" points to this window.
- Microsoft Internet Explorer: A browser window displaying a web page with employee information. A callout box labeled "Web application" points to this window.

Red arrows indicate the integration and data flow between these components, showing how the Notes application, 3rd party application, and Contact component are assembled into the overall composite application.
